SiRT Mandate

The Serious Incident Response Team (SiRT) is responsible for investigating incidents involving death, serious injury, sexual assault, intimate partner violence, and other matters that are determined to be in the public interest. These incidents may arise from the actions of any police officer in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick.

SiRT investigates incidents that occur both on and off duty. This independent oversight helps ensure public confidence in the process and avoids any real or perceived bias that could result from police officers investigating other police officers.

At the conclusion of each investigation, the SiRT Director must decide whether the evidence supports laying criminal charges against the officer involved. If the Director determines that charges are not warranted, a public summary of the investigation is released which explains the reasons for the decision and includes the information required by regulation.

When charges are laid, the report does not discuss the facts as the matter is before the courts and the Serious Incident Response Team Regulations under the Police Act limit disclosure.

On November 5, 2026, Constable Wael Musleh was charged with criminal harassment under paragraphs 264(2)(a) and (c) of the Criminal Code and breach of trust by a public officer under section 122 of the Criminal Code.
